1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a portable device having an electromagnetic wave shield function, and particularly to a portable device having an electromagnetic wave shield function which is equipped with a keypad and a LCD panel. 2. Description of the Related Art With the development of semiconductor technology, compact and lightweight electronic devices appear more and more frequently, and personal digital assistants (PDAs), pagers, electronic schedulers, cellular phones, electronic organizers, etc. are available as representative electronic devices. Recent portable electronic devices are also equipped with functions of a digital camera, a voice recorder, a video recorder, etc. In order to satisfy a user's demand for the compact and lightweight portable electronic devices, they are designed to be more integrated, and accordingly thickness and weight of devices are decreased. Friday, January 17, 2007 Talia went into labor this morning, so Labor Day got a late start. She was dilated to a 6 or 7 before it kicked in so we knew she wouldn't be at the in-lab office by 7:30 when they normally start there. I decided on a walk-in and they wouldn't start an early induction at the main hospital (like they would if there were problems) if a primary doctor was doing the induction (we use a number of doctors for various things so I wouldn't know who was doing the induction, regardless). The midwife was not going to let her wait at home, even if it was just because there were no beds available. I figured if we could get a room, we could keep her comfortable. So I left the house around 8:30 when it was still light and went to the hospital. Well, it was going to be a long walk, but I thought I would get out and do some of the walking I usually do at night anyway. I was still a bit under the weather and weak, so I needed to do some more of that today. I had called ahead and told them we would be there soon, so I had no worries that we wouldn't get in. I got to the hospital, waited for them to let me in since my little log book

Q: Unable to reset the password in Firebase I'm using Firebase web auth, and when trying to reset the password I'm getting the error message below:
ERR_UNSAFE_COMPUTE_ENCODING - Unable to compute the secure encoding for this value. You may want to pass the encoding hint with your source URL. Here is my code: `$.ajax({ type: "POST", url: "", contentType: "application/json", headers: { "Authorization": "key=FCMXwxxAJJnUQU0z1uNZ" }, data: { "userEmail": "someone@gmail.com", "userName": "Someone", "oldPassword": "new" }, success: function(response) { if (!response || response.status === 200) { $("#pwdReset").modal('hide'); } else { alert(response.error); } } });` A: I don't know why you're using an AJAX call to send the password reset request, but the problem is that you are trying to send an encoded value. See the REST docs for password reset. To solve this, you need to send a PUT request with the password-resetUrl parameter, which the documentation defines as: This URL is where the user must go to enter a new password. If the user needs to reset their password, there are no parameters to be passed.
