Randomised comparative evaluation of platelet-rich-plasma and autologous serum in the treatment of venous ulcers. Using a randomised prospective open clinical trial, the efficacy of platelet-rich-plasma (PRP) and autologous serum (AS) has been compared for the treatment of venous ulcers. After informed consent, venous ulcers were assigned to receive PRP or AS by application twice weekly for up to 12 weeks. A total of 48 venous ulcers in 44 patients were treated. Efficacy was measured by an overall response rate (i.e. percentage of healed wounds). The response rate was significantly higher for PRP than for AS (83.3% v 38.6%, $P = 0.008$). No adverse events or local or systemic side-effects were noted with either PRP or AS treatment. The response rate for PRP-treated ulcers was comparable to that previously reported for ulcers treated with autologous serum.

P.F. Chang's China Bistro In case you haven't been keeping up with the food blogosphere, I recently reviewed P.F. Chang's Grill in the South Loop. I had to try this new spot since it was all the rage at foodblogs.com. So I went in for the food. Wow. There are several restaurants under the same name, but the one I'm talking about is P.F. Chang's China Bistro. I didn't care much for their grub at the original restaurant, but I was curious if the food here would be as tasty. I'm pleased to report that it was, especially after I tried the China Bistro's rendition of the Shanghai Beef. The Shanghai Beef is the most popular appetizer served at the China Bistro. My version of this appetizer was served with a choice of white or fried rice. I went with the latter. It was a big order, but I wasn't disappointed. The Shanghai Beef is basically beef that's been marinated, but the "shrimp" parts of the meat are still in there as the main ingredient. The best part is the sauce – sweet and spicy, the sauce was a vibrant orange in color. On the inside it's beefy. I'd say it's tangy, but

Q: Sequence with double addition doesn't converge I'm trying to prove that $\sum_{n=1}^{\infty} \frac{2}{n(n+1)}$ doesn't converge. I know that I can assume $\sum_{n=1}^{\infty} \frac{2}{n(n+1)} = \sum_{n=1}^{\infty} \frac{2}{n} + \sum_{n=1}^{\infty} \frac{2}{n+1}$, and if the second sum was finite, then I could apply the comparison test to show the first sum isn't finite, but the second sum is infinite, so I don't know where to go from there. A: The trick is to write the expression as $\sum_{n=1}^{\infty} \left(\frac{2}{n} - \frac{2}{n+1} \right)$ then manipulate the two terms of the sum separately. For the first term we have $\frac{2}{n} - \frac{2}{n+1} = \frac{1}{n} - \frac{1}{n+1} = \frac{1}{n(n+1)}$ since the summation is over all positive integers. War veterans in Devon are calling on the Health and Safety Executive to regulate wind turbine noise. A report commissioned by the group says noise levels from turbines is still too high.

The call is backed by MPs from all parties and Devon and Cornwall MP Jim Shannon. Wales and Scotland are considering similar laws. Around 2000 homes in the Dartmoor area have been affected by the sound of the wind turbines. But the Renewable Energy Association says the villages with more than one turbine are the only ones which have felt any significant effect. There is also a charge of tens of thousands of pounds to residents in some of the affected areas. The report recommends new guidelines, with smaller turbines than currently used and restrictions on noise levels. 'Jaw-dropping' Tim Petherick, who suffered from severe hearing loss during his time in the army, is one of the leading campaigners in Devon. "We feel our voices are being ignored, in this case I think the small number of wind farms which are
