Real Spy Monitor V2 G smart (4GB storage) Wifi/Laptop.China canceled its plans for a huge new Pacific Coast trade pact as the United States launched a trade conflict with the world's second-largest economy. Chinese officials announced the cancellation of the proposed Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership on Monday after the Trump administration launched a trade war in June with China over national security concerns, The New York Times reported. The 10-nation pact, also known as the RCEP, was to have been signed last week in Chile, but was put on hold in August after the Trump administration said it would require the U.S. to open its markets to U.S. firms and sell China more American-made agricultural goods. China responded by halting the free-trade talks and announcing a 30-percent import tax on American products, including soybeans, beef and cars, a move that the Trump administration labeled “unacceptable.” Chinese Commerce Ministry spokesman Gao Feng said Monday that it was the U.S. that stood to lose most from a potential U.S.-China trade war, the Times said, citing an official document. He added that Beijing would not be reckless in the face of U.S. threats. “We are willing to work with the U.S. side on a mutually acceptable basis in order to maintain and promote the development of the RCEP,” Gao said, according to the Times. “We will continue to take a responsible stance towards bilateral trade and improve the level of mutual trust,” he said.
