Effects of intravenous immunoglobulin therapy on the clinical outcomes of systemic lupus erythematosus: a systematic review and meta-analysis. To evaluate the effects of intravenous immunoglobulin (IVIG) treatment on the clinical outcomes of systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE). An extensive literature search for randomized controlled trials (RCTs) of IVIG therapy with active SLE was performed using PubMed, EMBASE, and CINAHL databases. After screening for inclusion and exclusion criteria, eight RCTs were included. Pooled analysis using a random-effects model was performed. Among the 8 studies, the methodological quality of five studies was good and three were moderate. Pooled analysis from five studies indicated a positive clinical effect of IVIG therapy in inducing or maintaining remission in active SLE, with a pooled relative risk of 2.72 (95% confidence interval [CI]: 1.86 to 3.94). Subgroup analysis according to treatment dose revealed that IVIG therapy (1g/kg/d) compared with placebo had a positive clinical effect on the maintenance of remission in SLE with a pooled relative risk of 3.18 (95% CI: 2.11 to 4.81). Subgroup analysis based on IVIG concentration (0.4 g/kg/d or 0.4 g/kg/2d) also showed a positive clinical effect in maintaining active SLE remission with a pooled relative risk of 4.66 (95% CI: 3.27 to 6.64). Subgroup analysis according to IVIG administration showed that both 1g/kg/d IVIG infusion and 0.4 g/kg/d IVIG administration had a positive clinical effect in maintaining active SLE remission with a pooled relative risk of 3.11 (95% CI: 2.12 to 4.51) and 3.12 (95% CI: 2.08 to 4.66) respectively. The findings suggest that IVIG therapy has a positive clinical effect in inducing or maintaining active SLE remission.Q: Javascript pattern for using a string twice? Are you ready to get your holiday card done, but feel like it's not going to be your best work yet? Here's a tip on how to make it less 'condescending' and more memorable. I've written a million blog posts on handwriting, and I've outlined a ton of tips on how to improve your writing, but I've never seen this particular tip for handwriting yet, so I've got a few tips on how you can make your thank-you cards even better. From my experience, when a new business card is given out, the first thing your business will receive is a card that looks like this: (This example wasn't actually sent to me, because the last card I got was this one, but it looks just like most of the new cards I get. If you have gotten a card like this one, you have certainly noticed that this card is starting to become a staple. I've gotten so many of these cards that it's actually a little bit hard to enjoy the new card when I get this one (you can see this effect in the background of this photo of me speaking in a video I did for a conference last year). If you want to see the 'grand finale' of 'designer thank you cards' that are a little bit more expensive, try this one. This is a card that's more of an expensive card, which is okay, and will buy you more than another thank you card, but if you're sending it out to someone that is really important to you, this is a better option. The reason why most people send out more cheap cards is because they don't have much money or they don't know a designer. This card is also very generic. I'm sure I've had a lot of these cards, and I can honestly say I've never really enjoyed it, because the last card I got had almost the same design. These are the mistakes you'll make while sending out standard thank you cards. I'll continue this blog post on how you can make your cards way more special, even if your budget is low. Below is a template for you to get an idea of how to make your own cards. If you look at my cards below, they are actually not different designs. I think that is why they are all so similar to each other. The reason why I made the cards so similar was because I'm trying to illustrate a different way of
