It can rip the selected sections of a FLAC file to MP3 format or rip the whole FLAC file to several MP3 files according to the settings. It's perfect for those who want to rip their favorite music to MP3 format and can easily use its helpful interface to select, split, trim, and encode FLAC files. Users can also create a self-contained backup copy of FLAC files and MP3 files without the loss of quality. Re: Best Free FLAC to MP3 Converter For Mac: I would suggest the Matroska Media Converter. This uses the MXF (Matroska) standard for encoding (and it's cross-platform too). MXF is a 'container' standard which is able to hold multiple files in a single file. It also incorporates the ability to edit metadata (including extracting the artist and title information). There are lots of examples of MXF files online. Re: Best Free FLAC to MP3 Converter I would suggest you to use SoundJuicer to rip them to MP3, which would be much faster. (also uses less CPU, and gets rid of the MP3 artifacts) than FLAC -> MP3, which is still more than good enough for any audio use. You can use FLAC to rip your entire collection to MP3, then use JRiver Media Player to rip it to any other format. Re: Best Free FLAC to MP3 Converter Actually... I would suggest you to try EasyTAG music manager. This is just a sample of one, and it supports almost all the formats. You can select a file with "File > Add", use it to search for it, and then select one of its formats in "Tools > Format > Convert". And you can pick whether to save the new file with the same name, but 77a5ca646e
