Error 945 at service: Restoring network access Tip: If you have a connection that needs to be saved, follow these three steps to restore it without changing your username and password. Your network adapter or computer, or a computer running Windows Server 2008 or 2008 R2, or Windows 8 and Windows 8.1 or Windows Phone 8. Press the WIN + R key. Then enter the IP address and port of your computer or laptop at the top of the login window: \\\\192.168.0.2. A window will appear in which select "Restore connection". In the next step, select "Remove device" and select what you want to remove. Advice Please note that you must specify the exact IP addresses and port, otherwise you may need to redefine them. If you need to delete a domain server, you can do this by simply dragging and dropping to another line. If the connection was lost and then restored, then after the restoration it will not work. This case is described in the Windows system services configuration file (WinServices.dll). For more information about reconnecting, see the "Local Area Networks" section in the "Network Connections" chapter. Updated: 12/17/2014 Summary: Enable the IPv6 protocol to access a remote computer in "Secure Sessions". You will never forget your password or login if there was no direct connection with them. To protect your computer from unexpected attacks or hacks, you can connect it to a security system connected via IPv4 or IPv8 protocols. But as soon as a connection to a remote computer occurs, most of them will cause error 1053 on the server or attack their own system, so in general, we can assume that connecting via IPv7 reliably protects the computer from attacks and allows you not to worry about their consequences.
