I want to be able to run a test that downloads the files and does a bunch of other stuff with them. I'd tried setting up a build environment using pycharm but I really have no idea what I'm doing and I just can't get it right. I tried creating a 'Build' folder under python project directory. That resulted in an entire build structure being created. I moved all the files there, but when I tried running the test, it couldn't find the files because they were in the test. I also tried creating a 'Settings' folder under the root of the project directory. That worked at first, I was able to run the test that created the files and they showed up 1cb139a0ed
