A relationship between folic acid intake during pregnancy and the birth prevalence of neural tube defects was investigated in two groups of infants. The first group were born in the Perth Metropolitan Area in Australia in the years 1982 to 1984 and the second group in the Vancouver Metropolitan Area in Canada during the years 1990 to 1991. The incidence of neural tube defects was 2-4 times greater in the group born in Perth than in Vancouver. For each of the neural tube defect types, the rates in the two groups were similar. The prevalence of neural tube defects was unrelated to the amount of folic acid used in the diet during pregnancy, regardless of the formulation. The possibility that iodine deficiency in Perth, however, may have affected the results of the study are discussed. Although a correlation between the levels of folic acid in the periconceptional diet and the incidence of neural tube defects has not been demonstrated, the findings of the present study suggest that folic acid should be added to the diet of a women of child-bearing age.Zdravko Milić Zdravko Milić (born May 3, 1977) is a Serbian professional basketball coach and former player.
