1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a gas sensing element and a gas sensor for measuring, for example, the oxygen content of exhaust gas emitted from the cylinders of a vehicle engine. 2. Description of the Related Art It is proposed to determine the air-fuel ratio of a mixture supplied to a vehicle engine by detecting a parameter indicative of the concentration of a gas component (e.g., oxygen, NOx) in the exhaust gas emitted from the vehicle engine. One such example of this method is disclosed in Japanese Patent Publication No. 63-14106. More specifically, the air-fuel ratio of a mixture supplied to the engine is corrected based on the concentration of oxygen in the exhaust gas detected by a gas sensing element. In this type of gas sensing element, when only the concentration of oxygen is detected, a delay in the output of the element is large, compared to the case when a mixture ratio of air and an exhaust gas component is detected. For example, when detecting only the concentration of oxygen, the gas sensing element is generally mounted in a housing
