The use of LEDs, both red-orange LEDs (or ROLEDs) and blue LEDs, continues to grow in popularity. Often, the design of an LED (and, specifically, the lens, cover, and/or housing design used for the LED) impacts the appearance of the LED and its suitability for a particular application. For example, the design of a lens, cover, or housing on an ROLED can be critical to the appearance of the ROLED. Similarly, when using a blue or other LED with a particular lens, cover, or housing, the appearance of the lens, cover, or housing can be critical to the appearance of the overall LED and/or the performance of the LED. There are several conventional lens designs that may be used with LED modules. These designs include circular (e.g., "drum" or "spinner") or elliptical optics. Circular optics provide a relatively constant illumination area on an LED. Elliptical optics allow a larger range of light from the LED to escape from the lens than circular optics. Elliptical optics are also used with blue or other color LEDs to maximize the amount of blue light emitted by the LED, thereby increasing the efficiency of the LED. Circular optics are often formed from one or more lenses that are fixed in place. While the circular optics are relatively low cost, they are often too large for some applications and/or are not aesthetically pleasing. Elliptical optics, in contrast, tend to be more expensive but are aesthetically appealing. Specifically, the use of elliptical optics allows a relatively large amount of light to escape from an LED, which reduces size, costs, and may improve other performance characteristics of the LED. Q: Optional form with jQuery and AJAX I've got a form which is submitted with jQuery Ajax and then checked for errors with validation. So far, the form works as expected. However, I want to set up an option to submit the form with or without the validation. Here's a simplified version of the form and ajax code: Submit

I've found a method about RESET TRANSACTION: ALTER SYSTEM COMMIT RESET; But is there any way to do this in specific transaction? Here I don't want to undo the changes that my transactions is doing, rather I want to rollback them all. A: What you have found is to implement it: ALTER SYSTEM COMMIT RESET; That will commit the current transaction. However you can use check_transaction function that will report you when there is any active transaction: SELECT name, status, * from v$transaction; You can use it to check whether you need rollback. Q: Convert specific columns of data frame to vector I would like to convert specific columns in a data.frame to a character vector. In other words, the following code df = data.frame(grp=rep(1:2,each=5), var1=c(1:15), var2=c(1:9)) > df grp var1 var2 1 1 1 1 2 1 2 2 3 1 3 3 4 1 4 4 5 1 5 5 6 2 6 6 7 2 7 7 8 2 8 8 9 2 9 9
