Since I installed MongoDB instead of looking for the answer to my questions, I have 5 issues. 1) I can't seem to connect to a Solr Server because the default port is 8080 and I need to specify port 9999. I am working with a Network of ten servers, which doesn't work for me. I'd like to avoid port numbers as well. 2) Solr has it's own Query Language, which I found to be pretty straightforward. 3) Solr server-side caching is very important to Solr's search results. 4) Solr is generally much more "Legacy" and "Boring" than MongoDB 5) Solr is much more difficult to administer. So, I was considering MongoDB instead of Solr. Does anyone have any experience working with MongoDB? Thank you, Vince A: You can use mongoDB for full text searching, but it is not as straightforward as it is in solr. In general, the way people use mongoDB for full text searching is via an index. In mongoDB there is a default, text-based, index for the data. To be able to use it with a query, you need to define additional "fields" to include in the search query. The important thing is to be clear in what field you need to use text searching and provide the correct matching function. Please refer to the MongoDB Documentation for more information. Edit: I just saw that you mentioned in your comment that 1cdb36666d
