Q: Finding difference between values in a list Suppose I have a list, for example: a = [1,1,0,0,1,1,1,0,1,1,1] What I want to do is to find the difference between the values of a list so that I get something like this: a = [1, 2, 3, 0, 2, 4, 4, 2, 6, 4, 6] I have this code: b = [] c = [] for n in a: b.append(n-1) c.append(n) But I can not get the desired results. Thanks

A: You can use a dict and.update() to update the dictionary with the values and update the list by adding the values in a list comprehension: a = [1,1,0,0,1,1,1,0,1,1,1] d = {i: n for n, i in zip(a[1:], a)} l = [v for v, k in d.items() if k] Output: [1, 2, 3, 0, 2, 4, 4, 2, 6, 4, 6]

A: Use recursion: >>> def even(lst): ... if lst: ... lst = lst[1:] ... return [v - 1 for v in lst] ... return [] ...

To tell the truth, I did not want to play the game at all, I just wanted to do a really good job in it. And it has been for a while! The changes, over four years after its release, consist of a large number of features that have been added. This is the list of the changes. Changes in combat You are immersed in combat completely. When you die in battle, you can not make any adjustments. You die! That is it. Some of them you could not complete before this, but there were issues that limited the experience you could have.
