I just finished the game and.Q: Did the 15th Dalai Lama and the 2nd Panchen Lama refuse to accept the Chinese version of history? As Wikipedia says, the Chinese have recently published a history book, "The One China: A New History of the People's Republic of China", which states that the Second Panchen Lama (Gedun Chöpel of Tibet) and the 15th Dalai Lama (His Holiness Tenzin Gyatso of Tibet) are Lin-Bian [people] who are of Tibetan ethnicity. In this book, the Dalai Lama had insulted China and was asked to resign as head of the Tibetan government-in-exile in 1959. He fled to India and was welcomed there by Indian politicians. In The One China, Tibet was called "Xiangguo" (South of the River), and the official history in China says that the Tibetan rebels who had received support from India and worked in secret with India were defeated after the Dalai Lama fled to India. Whereas the Panchen Lama received support from China in person. Later, Chinese authorities insisted to publish the book about Tibet as "recovered" (Xiangguo) territory, although the Dalai Lama and Panchen Lama declined. So did the 15th Dalai Lama, the 2nd Panchen Lama, or both of them refuse to accept the Chinese version of history? If yes, how much does the Chinese government know about this? A: First of all, if you look into the history of Tibet it's probably more correct to say that the 2nd Panchen Lama fled to India before 1959 and only later was sent back to Tibet to lead the government, after which the 6th Dalai Lama was sent to India and later the 5th Dalai Lama was sent to Mongolia, from which the 5th Dalai Lama later fled to India. To answer your question though, Tibet was not part of China until the arrival of the CCP in Lhasa. The 2nd Panchen Lama was forced to return to e79caf774b
