Photoshop Screenshots The following are some samples of how to use Photoshop elements. Some New Photoshop Elements Text layers enable you to place text onto layers, and move them, and then make it easy to create text effects. Layer styles are a powerful new feature and make it easy to use layer effects to create gradient fills, or create round corners or drop shadows. You can create complex editing selections that cut and combine multiple layers at once. Selections enable you to edit layers without affecting other layers. You can also clone layers onto a new layer at the same time you make a selection on the layer. Effects make it possible to create photo filters, and design patterns. If you work a lot with pixels, this is the Photoshop tool for you. Use the Power Tools: Brush, Lens Correction, and Puppet Warp If you'd rather not use the Adobe application, many of Photoshop's features work in other programs, like GIMP (the GNU Image Manipulation Program), as well. However, you may need to choose a different approach if you use a different program. It's sometimes easier to use the Photoshop-specific tools that are built into the program. They include a variety of brushes for painting images. You can customize the brushes to create more or less detail in your painting. You can also use the Photoshop lens correction feature for correcting an image. You can also use Photoshop puppet warp for positioning objects on a layer. How much were you influenced by the engine of the PUMA Goat? That's a fair question. I always try and challenge myself to step outside of the design that's already there. The PUMA Goat is the perfect balance between function and style. It's not really a functional shoe but it certainly isn't hideous. That's a good thing. As I mentioned, the return is a major part of my philosophy. I try not to design a shoe that people are only comfortable wearing once or twice. That's not my style. I like to create pieces that people can wear all the time. I've come to really enjoy the return of the boot for this reason. My first boot was the Dr. Martens Kick that people loved so much but it only lasted a year. People were wearing the style every day but they just couldn't live with the ugly boot. I'm glad I brought it back. Watch the video interview with Viktor HorstingStallion Stallion is a mature stallion who lives on the U.S. Racing Hall of Fame farm in Lexington, Kentucky. In a three-hour debate from a hospital in the Bronx, nearly 1,400 parents, advocates and doctors gathered in support of the proposed settlement between the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York and over 2,000 people who accuse clergy members of sexually abusing them while in the church's care. The abusive acts took place over decades of time and the events have continued to this day, the proposal says, and it will help "completion" the Archdiocese of New York "while maintaining the integrity and reputation of the Roman Catholic Church." Eric Castro, a New York attorney who specializes in clergy sexual abuse cases, tells CBS News' 60 Minutes Overtime that the proposed settlement is the result of decades of work and it "is a good day for the over 2,000 victims who have sued the Archdiocese for clergy sexual abuse." However, Castro says some victims are still pushing for a jury trial and they're getting help from national advocacy groups. Eric Castro, who represents the approximately 2,000 people who accuse clergy members of sexually abusing them in the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, CBS News "I think some of the time it shows the dedication of the church to its 1.1 million people. But it's really doing it at the expense of the victims and their families," says Castro, who is part of a group called the Community of Inquiry, which tries to serve the needs of victims in a different way than other advocacy groups. "I think some victims feel that they can't go the court and speak publicly and demand the truth that they know the truth that the bishop, the diocese, the church, the administration, the clergy should know it. And then the victims I think feel that's a betrayal." He says these are people who don't have the financial resources to engage the archdiocese's legal team directly and their options are limited. And he says the archdiocese has long said that such abuse is "unthinkable." He says they say there's been a change and it's "reflected on in the formation of the victims' committee, the program to provide counseling to the victims, the creation of the Safe Environment Task Force which are programs that have been long overdue." He says the archdiocese created the victim's committee as a way to communicate, apologize and to help. He says there are victim support groups which have monitored compliance. "A public apology is a very positive thing. Maybe the only way to call
