Supervized assertive community treatment for individuals with major depression and severe substance abuse. Assertive community treatment (ACT) is a model for providing assertive, collaborative care to individuals with severe substance abuse problems and comorbid major depression. The result of previous work is a program that has been extensively researched, implemented, and evaluated. As such, it is ready for a broader dissemination. This research examines the effect of ACT on depression, mental health service utilization, and cost. The data come from a four-site randomized trial with random assignment to ACT, standard care, or treatment as usual. Hierarchical linear modeling was used to examine change over the six-month treatment period. Treatment was well received by consumers and providers, and no significant differences between the ACT and control conditions were found. In addition, ACT was as effective as standard care.Bailrsokta Boglar The Bailrsokta Boglar or Parliament Stones (literally: Bailrsokta boglar in the Bokmål dialect) are two large glacial erratic boulders, located in Bijässel village, Omdal Municipality, Västmanland County, Sweden. The name of the boulders originates from a legend. The boulders are placed in the Bailrsokta boglar, as the goddesses Bailerot and Siri fall into a deep sleep here and the earth is sealed over them. When they awake they wonder to themselves how they got there and wonder if the land ever became fertile again. A young man tells them this happened, but when they go to their home, they find their cows to have begun giving milk again. From that
