Photoshop Elements, formerly Photoshop Lightroom, is a multimedia editing program that works with digital images and supports a wide variety of graphics file formats. It is designed to be more intuitive and easier to use than Photoshop. Another industry standard for creating, editing, and modifying graphics is Adobe Illustrator. It comes with Adobe Photoshop, but it's also on its own. Adobe Illustrator enables you to create, manipulate, and manage vector graphics from scratch. Vector graphics use mathematical formulas to specify coordinates in two-dimensional space, creating shapes that are inherently scalable, meaning they can be adjusted simply by scaling them. Illustrator offers a modular workspace that supports the tools needed for editing. You can create documents, draw shapes, and paint. You can also work with AutoCAD-style blocks to arrange and manipulate shapes, and modify them at any time. For more information on Adobe Photoshop and Adobe Illustrator, visit `www.adobe.com`. Photoshop Express If Photoshop is too complicated, Photoshop Express can do almost everything Photoshop can do. Photoshop Express includes several tools that enable you to modify images in a manner similar to a photo editing application. These include Spot Healing, Blend, Gradient Generator, Posterize, Color Adjust, Clone Sticker, and Preset Manager, which enables you to create and store a range of settings. The entire program is free and available for use on a variety of platforms, including Windows, Mac, iPad, iPhone, Android, and Web browsers. It's designed to make image editing simple. Because Photoshop is so heavily ingrained in the industry, most people know it can do the basic things. Photoshop Express is designed to be the ultimate consumer application. You can find more details on Photoshop Express at `www.adobe.com`. Photomerge One of the most popular features of Photoshop is Photomerge. A powerful tool for creating panoramic images, Photomerge includes the Merge to HDR Pro, which can create a single exposure from up to 10 different images. It supports HDR (.hdr) and OpenEXR (.exr) image formats, and enables you to create HDR images and Auto-Stitch images. For more on using Photomerge, go to `www.adobe.com`. Moire and Motion Blur Some modern digital cameras feature software that can reduce moire or interference in the original image caused by the horizontal and vertical lines of

Customized software is now an essential part of any business. And as the demand for such systems rises, so does the need to set them apart from the competition. At the annual conference of the Association for Corporate Image & Branding (ACIB), held in Bremen last week, the two countries' head coaches, Jürgen Klopp and Pep Guardiola, presented their plans to shore up their image and their organizations. From Germany, Bayern Munich's Alexander Nöbel, who took over the helm of the club following Jupp Heynckes' retirement last year, told the media that the German league and Bundesliga sides would be pushing for a joint approach to make sure they can keep pace with international soccer. "In Germany, there's a vibrant local fan culture that sees itself as a consumer of sport, and is willing to pay to watch professional teams on television," said Nöbel, who added that it's vital to protect these fans. Guergut's project Guardiola, meanwhile, has set up a project to make sure his success in La Liga translates into a similar strength at work. "It's a story that we need to narrate to everyone in the world," said Guardiola. "The Spanish president says we're the ones who eat the cake. He can't say that again, because it's not true. You can get carried away in the moment, but it has to be clear the negative consequences for the media, the economy, etc. It's a family story. The cake only goes to one side. It's his story, and that we have to make him aware of it." According to Guardiola, he is convinced that Guardiola's success in football will translate into a successful career as a head coach. "I'm convinced that we can do what other people cannot," he said. "I'm convinced that we can win everything that others cannot win because we have the talent. I'm extremely proud to be the manager of a team that has grown, and also because I believe this is a turning point in our lives, in our career. I think this team, how it works and functions, is reflected in the society that we're living in, and this is what I'm very proud of." \[[@pone.0183511.ref021], [@pone.0183511.ref024]\]. Site-Dependent Pt-Based Catalysts: Demonstration of a Marked Effect of Nucleation for the Formation of Pt Nanocrystals with Enhanced Catalytic Activity. Nanoparticles of Pt have attracted much interest as catalysts due to their high surface area and high activity. The formation of Pt nanoparticles (Pt NPs) proceeds under different conditions. In spite of the extensive research efforts, the mechanisms and kinetics of the formation of nanoparticles of Pt have not been fully elucidated and are still under discussion. In this study, the effects of medium type on the formation of Pt NPs have been investigated and demonstrated for the first time. Experiments have been performed using different growth environments during the formation of Pt NPs. The formation of Pt NPs depends on the pH, and the time-dependent changes of the size distribution of the Pt NPs have been examined in detail. These findings suggest that the medium in which the Pt NPs are formed has a significant influence on the morphology and crystallinity of the particles. In the absence of a medium, the Pt NPs are composed of cubic Pt, but as a result of interaction with the medium, the Pt NPs undergo nucleation and grow into spherical shapes. Owing to the nature of this surface effect, the size of the Pt NPs is significantly reduced. Nanoparticles of Pt formed under optimized conditions have higher catalytic activity than those prepared under nonoptimized conditions.Q: Why was my flag declined on this question? I was reviewing the Close Votes queue and flagged this question as'should be closed for being primarily opinion-based'. The user had posted an answer, and I answered it, too (the answer is the best one on the question). So I flagged it again, and I got this message: declined - flags should only be used to make moderators aware of content that requires their intervention What do I do in this case? A: You answered the question, and so your answer is the best content on that question. The best content gets upvotes and is therefore likely to reach the top of the questions page. In that case, an opinion based question is likely to attract the most informed and persuasive answers. Your answer now stands next to the question, and should attract people who want to discuss your answer and judge it. That discussion should likely happen on other sites on the Stack Exchange network; it is not appropriate for Stack Over
