Some of these methods include methods such as deslagging, filtration, de-sludging, precipitaton, chemical treatment, electrocoagulation, etc. Some of these methods are commonly used in the industry. However, in order to realize a comprehensive advantage of each method it is difficult to select and use a method without considering other factors. Particularly, in a case where the above mentioned fluid includes a waste water, such as high-concentration waste water, a highly-concentrated waste water, or a waste water, which is obtained by an industrial process other than a semiconductor manufacturing process, the above-mentioned method has a problem in that a large volume of a fluid is required, and an equipment is also required therefor. Further, in some of the methods, a large amount of chemicals is consumed. This makes the methods high-cost and makes the methods difficult to implement. Furthermore, the above-mentioned methods have the possibility to generate noise in the process in the case of the method that treats the waste water such as a high-concentration waste water by precipitating a solid, thus making it difficult to implement. In light of the above-mentioned problems, the present applicant has proposed an adsorption-type solid-liquid separator that employs a novel member capable of removing solid particles in a non-contact type, as disclosed in Korean Patent No. 10-0995-0073059. Korean Patent No. 10-0995-0073059 relates to an adsorption-type solid-liquid separator, which can be used to efficiently separate solid particles from a fluid by using an adsorbent that has an adsorbent layer to adsorb the solid particles.TIPPS IS PROMISING TIPPS IS PROMISING TIPPS IS PROMISING TIPPS IS PROMISING TIPPS IS PROMISING TIPPS IS PROMISING TIPPS IS PROMISING DeMarcus Tipt
