Chapter 105: Spontaneous and Pluralistic Imperialism The Price of Progress Who has ever tried to explain to you What it means that someone belongs To your field and your business And is not an alien descendant Of a dim-witted and turbulent race But the very thing that unifies you With the rest of the harvest-bound? Who has ever tried to explain to you Without condescending to you How the gold of your ideas can Seem to you so cloned and hollow, When you have been infected By such luminescence? Who has ever tried to explain to you What it is, to compromise To do without what wasn't before? To fit your ancient brambles Into the basket that was made for you Two thousand years ago? Who has ever tried to explain to you If you want to value what is living And exhaust it into nothingness, It's necessary to choose, at first, To respect its vestigial heritage By separating it from itself And outrunning its biological tricks. If you want to improve a system It will first not be you who will Devote himself to it, Who sets his boundaries and scorns to Cross them, Even when he already can hardly doubt That the enemy that opens his eyes Says exactly the same things as you. "The idea is incomplete and therefore badly used. I will take it as it comes now it has been replaced And made a plough-share, to be sown in race, colour and religion into only that which was alien to me, I will swallow it to my own detriment and to that of those near me and make it my food." That is Einstein's idea. That all these bastardisms Insult us by their superiority I have nothing against them, The least of them, Yet I'm a Romand And if I'm found in Belgium Who shall I be found by, Who shall understand what my Breast in my heart is telling me? The price of progress cannot Go

Okay, I'm getting into this! I'm so far into the Starter Set that I have almost never left town. Anyways, it is extremely difficult to find monsters for the game! Even in the hold I have encountered very little critters. Wanting to do this is fine. Meeting characters in the lakeside bar for a social session would be nice. But how is one supposed to find a basic, regular, monster? Any advice? Will I find them easier to fight as I advance in level? Or am I just better off using my Fighter to battle them?]]> What the hell was that?2017-07-17T21:56:13Z3 years 7 months ago100What the hell was that?
