We used a two-step assay to study the involvement of the HSV-encoded regulatory protein U54 in the interaction of HSV with the infected host cell. When 0.1 microgram of HSV DNA was introduced into 10(6) HeLa S3 cells with a transfecting agent, the level of U54 mRNA declined to undetectable levels after infection with HSV. However, in the presence of 2 micrograms of DNA per 10(6) cells, a 4-8-fold increase in U54 mRNA was observed after infection with the virus. We also observed a marked increase in U54 protein synthesis during the two-step assay. It was apparent that this increase could not be attributed solely to the effect of HSV DNA, for similar results were obtained after infection with a nonviral transformation-deficient, mutant tsA1 HSV.[Enzymatic synthesis of (S)-3-chloro-N-phosphonoacetyl-L-proline with phosphopantothenic acid and (S)-3-chloro-D,L-proline].
