Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a system for magnetically treating sewage and more particularly to a system for removing organic substances and heavy metal values and heavy metal ions from sewage by use of iron powder as a magnetic material, and a hollow fiber membrane to be used therefor. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, along with the promotion of the improvement of the environment and the development of the awareness of the pollution of the nature, the understanding of the importance of sewage treatment have been increased. The chemicals and the pollutants generated from the industrial and the human bodies are introduced in sewage. The sewage contains various biological matters and various organic substances and heavy metals which pollute the nature. The heavy metal ions contained in the sewage are accumulated in the body of the human being and animals. Therefore, it is important to remove the organic substances and the heavy metal ions. In addition, there is a large value for the prevention of the pollution of the nature of the removal of the organic substances and the heavy metal ions. The common sewage treatment systems are as follows. (1) A physical treatment system using gravity. (2) A biological treatment system which adds a large amount of aerated activated sludge to the sewage. (3) A chemical treatment system using chlorine and ammonia. However, although these conventional systems may be effective for the removal of the organic substances, it is difficult to remove the heavy metal ions effectively by the conventional systems. Accordingly, a large amount of money and time are required for treating the sewage containing heavy metal ions. In addition, the conventional systems have drawbacks in that the applicable range of the treatment system is limited. FIG. 1 shows an installation and a principle of 595f342e71
