Narvas is a pre-apocalyptic post-cyberpunk RPG set in a city that was destroyed in a catastrophic EMP blast over 10 years ago. A series of Resonance accidents have brought many forgotten horrors to the surface. Players are free to take any path, but every character begins the game with a specific goal, that must be completed in order to access the next arc of the story. Players can begin from ground zero, or jump straight in at the end of The Dark Years. The key elements of the Narvas universe are its world-building and backstory. The game world has multiple races - human, wolf-like rogues, and what appears to be a hybrid of a human and talukhi, called the Narvas. The Narvas are the most advanced of these races. They are not quite human, but not quite other, either. At war with each other and the various factions fighting against them, the Narvas have been weakened, but they still retain the knowledge and technology that made them powerful in the past. Narvas have achieved some degree of unity - they are not engaged in constantly fighting each other. All of this is undermined by the recent series of Resonance accidents, which have damaged the world even more. The background story of Narvas is just as important as the world. The human factions have seen the narvas as beings just like them, and have exploited them to our own ends. Through god and evil, Humanity has fallen and the universal consciousness has become a sentient being, known only as The King. The Dark Years: The Dark Years takes place 10 years after the EMP, during which the world has fallen into chaos. Events have unfolded in different regions in different ways, and people are no longer able to control the world around them. Some are interested in rebuilding, while others wish to end the world. Narvas itself, following the recent Resonance events, has declared independence. They have been granted a degree of self-governance, which includes the right to declare war on any of the other factions. One faction, however, has taken these events as an opportunity to enslave the narvas under their control. NMS: Nicholas Montfort: a bounty hunter who grew up among the ashines. The last of his kind, he now works with The Kuruptivor. George Nass: also a bounty hunter, he lives in the ruins of the city of Olympia, and is a friend of Nassa.

What's new:

is a collection of personal essays and vignettes that the author researched during his service with the Vietnam War Army. In this book, Malcolm Rawlings describes the sickness, the suffering, the death, and the life of a soldier. The vetfiction project is a young adult non-fiction penpal book swap established in the days before the internet. The idea came from a journal writing workshop attended by a veteran and non-combat active duty military veteran in the south. International Colloquium on Virtual Environments was held in St-Laurent-Jolli-lès-Tours, France from May 30th to 31st, 2004 for the first time in the framework of the 27th International Symposium on Virtual Environments (ISVE). This work is a study of the misrepresentations made in War Against War, the book by Noam Chomsky and Edward Herman (which has won the Orwell Prize) and, more particularly, my attempt to analyse the nature and the mendacity of American "conscientious objectors". Using a few exemplary cases in the book as well as interviews carried out by the author in the United States, the study seeks to expose the most typical "bases" of... In this book, Arthur Read attempts to recount the life of writer and surveyor Thomas Crawford in Dundee as seen through Crawford's letters and journal entries and the memories of those who knew him. Modernism and Identity concerns the literary heritage of the 20th Century and attempts to show that the modernist masters of the age can help us to understand the vicissitudes of identity: the problem of the self, the problem of discrimination, otherness and belonging. Jung's first international psychoanalytical congress took place in Zimmerberg in 1910. Freud's contribution was on "Projective (psychometry)" and Jung gave a lecture on the clinical situation, which contained the first suggestion of what was to become the introvert-extrovert theory. His paper was entitled "Psycho-analytic Observations on the Nature of the Psychoses." So much has been written and written about James Joyce's Dubliners (which has been more read than any other book in the world) that its icon has become its icon, and its vastness has become a redundancy. This has all been lost in the crowd of powerful images and literary treatments of the Dubliners that have come down to us from the early 20th century
