In the year 1900, 50% of the air we breathed was actually composed of dust. For centuries, factories and farms had been churning out so much dust that some were calling it the “new black.” Now, in 2013, we are nearly 80% wealthier than we were just one hundred years ago. Yet, the air we breathe is not only cleaner, but our lungs are healthier and we have less allergies than ever before. When I was a kid, moving was a nuisance. I had a lot of stuffed animals, but when I would take a big move, most of them ended up on the moving truck or the floor of the moving truck. It took me about eight years to realize that there was a real danger in moving those stuffed animals. But, I certainly understood the importance of my friend’s stuffed polar bear going into the moving truck with the rest of my toys. So, I’m pretty certain that an army of stuffed animals hitting the highway is a threat to the health and safety of the entire planet. But what could moving with millions of real stuffed animals do to the air that we breathe? According to the EPA, the moving industry alone generates about 1.3 billion tons of air pollution each year. That is why the EPA and the Department of the Interior called on moving companies and the movers themselves to start doing more to reduce pollution. Moving companies were asked to reduce their emissions by 40 to 45 percent in the next 10 years by reducing unnecessary truck use, switching to greener trucks, increasing the usage of hybrids and more fuel-efficient vehicles and installing technologies that would cut down on emissions such as turning off unnecessary electronics and improving the efficiency of heating and air conditioning systems. Did moving companies respond? Probably not. When the Movers and Their Stuff hit the road, according to the EPA, they are also creating a massive amount of carbon dioxide. Taking into consideration all the miles driven and all the moving companies that are in operation, that amounts to 42.4 million tons of carbon dioxide. That’s 42.4 million tons of carbon dioxide emissions in the air, poisoning our lungs and contributing to global warming. Not only that, what happens on the road stays on the road. According to the EPA, the “dirt created by the movement, settles on the earth’s surface, providing a film of topsoil that may be easily blown out

Former civil rights champion Rev. C.T. Vivian, the head of the world’s largest LGBT church, said he’s voting for President Donald Trump. The church has been in the spotlight for its political activism. Vivian spoke at the party convention for the president-elect in Florida, which is home to the evangelical megachurch. There, Vivian endorsed Trump as a champion for justice and civil rights in the face of persecution. During a Monday appearance on Fox News, Vivian said Trump’s “very inspired” and “very positive” campaign for the presidency not only brought conservative Catholics and Protestants into the fold, but attracted members of other faith communities as well. The progressive pastor’s endorsement marked a sharp contrast to the national backlash he’s received from LGBT and gay rights activists since leading the United Church of Christ in 2015. “When you look at what is happening, for the most part, in the Black community, with regard to the gay community, it has become an entirely different discourse in terms of race and justice and equality,” Vivian said on “Your World” on Monday. “When you look at the last eight years of the Obama administration, the left feels victorious in the institutions of this nation. So the LGBT community, the Black community — we got to listen to the cries of the oppressed. So we are very, very pleased with the fact that there is a courageous candidate.” Pressed by host Megyn Kelly to explain his endorsement, Vivian said Trump, like Barack Obama, created a “very inspiring” atmosphere during the campaign. “I can see the magnanimous campaign that he ran,” Vivian said. “It helped bring conservatives back into this, and so we are very, very positive about the way things are going to be.” When Kelly asked Vivian to compare the two, he said Trump’s campaign “got to us here in the United Church of Christ.” “This is what civil rights was all about,” Vivian said, before comparing Obama’s presidency to the civil rights movement of the 1960s. “When we think of the struggle here in the 1960s, we think of a moral argument,” Vivian said. “In the Black movement, it was a question of civil
