AutoCAD originally used 2-D flat models (such as 2-D paper or drafting boards), which it manipulated for the benefit of architectural and engineering professionals. This functionality eventually evolved into 3-D models. With the addition of a basic mechanical drawing capability and, later, freehand objects, AutoCAD created a solid foundation for specialized drafting. Since AutoCAD 2014, CAD applications may access data in Microsoft Excel spreadsheets, which the user may load directly into a model or specify a location in an existing file. Autodesk 2018 was the last version of AutoCAD to use the N++ programming language. CAD software Hardware The first commercially available CAD software was AutoCAD, released in 1982. AutoCAD is developed by Autodesk, a software company that includes such other CAD products as Inventor, FUSION, Navisworks, Maya, 3ds Max, DWG Navigator, and AutoCAD 360. Autodesk also licenses FUSION to other CAD software companies and software development shops to develop CAD applications. Some commercial CAD programs, such as CATIA and Pro/E, now have functionality that can create or modify AutoCAD drawings, allowing them to be used interchangeably. CAD systems CAD software systems are divided into the following categories: CAD application (automated design): include graphic design applications, such as CAD/CAM, surface modeling, finite element analysis, mechanical engineering, and manufacturing design. CAD client (manual design): include software for creating, editing, storing, and sharing 2D and 3D drawing files. CAD management: CAD systems used to manage the creation of drawings or other data for multiple project locations. CAD server (automated design): CAD systems used to automate tasks and create projects for multiple project locations. CAD systems can also be separated into the following types: * On-premises CAD systems  On-premises systems On-premises CAD software runs on hardware that is either owned by the organization or purchased by them, and is not connected to the Internet. The client connects to the CAD server using a local network, or via a local-area network that is connected to a private intranet. This restricts the total number of drawings that can be stored on a client, but allows the drawings to be shared and edited by multiple users. Typically, on-premises CAD systems must be installed in a single location, and are rarely portable.  On-premises CAD systems * Web-based CAD systems **

Web-based CAD systems Web-based CAD systems connect to a computer and software server over the Internet. The server can be located in another country than the client or be hosted in ca3bfb1094

CALGARY — The Calgary Zoo is looking for a new home for a male eastern black rhino named Dambi, which will be there until it's time to retire him, officials said. The zoo has been housing the 16-year-old rhino for the past six years, but now officials say he's at the end of his life, and is not as healthy as he once was. The zoo hopes to find a new home for Dambi this winter, and is setting up a Facebook page where the public can help. "Dambi's days are numbered and we don't want to see this beautiful animal lose his beautiful life in vain," the Calgary Zoo said in a statement. The zoo says this is not an easy decision to make, but they know it's the best decision for Dambi. "Dambi was born in Australia and raised in Africa, where his life was similar to the African black rhino population," the zoo said. "He was a typical male and was part of a herd group." The zoo says Dambi will leave behind a large family, as well as friends from around the world, including the internet community. It hopes to find a family with an extensive experience caring for animals, as well as a willingness to work with the zoo to ensure the rhino gets the care it needs. Dambi is the first animal from Calgary to be retired, after the zoo's last two elephants, two female Burmese elephants, were sent to a sanctuary in the Philippines.
