Film Editing Software What started as a simple tool for cropping and adjusting images has developed into a world of moving-picture effects. Yet the basic crop tool still works effectively for just about any photo job. Editing footage is a specialized task that moves quickly past simple cropping. A balance must be struck between the time you spend cutting and pasting clips together, and the time it takes to analyze the story structure and film. Fortunately, editing software has developed into a much more powerful editing program. It is still primarily composed of layers of raster images and vector graphics, but it also has many of the features of a traditional photo editing program. In the following sections, I discuss some of the specific uses of editing programs for moving-image projects.

Family: Australia's first trial of two-child rule to start Published duration 8 January 2016 image copyright Getty Images image caption Family law expert Zara Khan says the new family law would help parents cope better with the "difficulties and stresses" of parenthood Australia's first trial of a two-child rule will begin on Thursday, the government says. The Family Law Act will be changed to allow only two children to be adopted by one parent. Family law expert Zara Khan said the move would increase the pressure on parents to be more committed to parenting and would help them better cope with the "difficulties and stresses" of parenthood. The government says the move is aimed at reducing the number of children in out-of-home care. The government estimates about half of all children who are adopted are adopted by a single parent. Under the new law, a married couple who has a daughter as their first child but no sons will not have access to a family court in the same way, and will have to separate or divorce in order to get their second daughter adopted.

"Australia's first two-child adoption law has come into effect, giving parents in a stable relationship the freedom to fulfil their family dreams," said Attorney-General George Brandis. "Most of the nation's support comes from families who are single or have children outside of marriage, and the law change will secure the best interests of children and families," he said. In a survey by non-government organisation Children First, found that "82% of all parents believe that having only two children is the right thing to do for their family life". The group also found that "85% of single parents and 91% of married parents said having only two children was the right thing to do for their family". As part of the policy, parents who are unable to meet the needs of their children in the community will be able to make a declaration to the Family Court to care for the children in the community while their parental rights are not being challenged. Zara Khan, from the Australian National University College of Law, says the legislation will give parents greater choice of how they want their families to be and is a valuable feature of the act. "In addition, the new law will provide parents and those who are adopting with more clarity about how their new family will be," she said. "It will also assist parents and those
