By analyzing the motion and specific attributes of players, FIFA '22 takes players into a hyper realistic, digital world of football — from players' footwork and positioning, to the fluidity of their on-ball movement and more realistic ball physics. "The result is an experience that's as close to real life as possible," explains Anthony Johnson, Creative Director, FIFA. "HyperMotion Technology is born from our desire to recreate the most immersive football experience possible and also embrace the technological advancements that we hope will empower us to do even more in the future. It is a future where we will be able to create a virtual reality football experience so that everyone can enjoy the most immersive and realistic football on Earth." "We've used our work with '22 to create some of the most beautiful, detailed 3D player models ever seen in a football game," says Sébastien Rieger, Senior Character Artist at EA Canada, "but it's the HyperMotion that best portrays how our players have gone from the real world onto the pitch." "FIFA '22 is the first time that we've incorporated player models into the game," says Johnson. "You'll see that the feet of the players in the game are now seamlessly connected to their foot via bones, just as they are in real life. This allows players to run, pass and move like the real players." "FIFA '22 is the first football game to incorporate the stars of their future," says Johnson. "By using real-world motion data, we have been able to give our very own version of Januzaj, N'Zonzi and Mirallas the chance to shine on the world stage." "FIFA '22 will deliver the speed, emotion, unpredictability and unpredictability of football," concludes Johnson. "We've been absolutely inspired by the real-life pace of an actual game and in doing so, created the most immersive and believable football action in video game history." FIFA '22 takes motion capture to new heights with enhanced, reactive player motion, new physical transitions, more realistic animations and playmaking controls. Additionally, the game introduces the ability to play in both 1v1 and 3v3
