Doberman Antics (2018) DVDRip. Calibri is a free font family for Microsoft Windows created by Microsoft Corporation... Retrieved from.The present invention generally relates to electronic data management systems and methods. More specifically, the present invention relates to electronic data management systems and methods for allowing a source user to navigate through and access information from a container system. Electronic data management systems, such as a computer system or other electronic device, can store and access large amounts of data and can display the data using graphical user interface components, such as a data management system window. A data management system window is a user interface component that provides a view of one or more data containers stored in an electronic data management system. The user interface component, which is typically located on a display monitor, can include components such as a browser, a folder tree, a snapshot, a data table, and other components known to one of ordinary skill in the art. Electronic data management systems can include a collection of data containers. A container includes data of any type. In many computer systems, a container includes information that can be displayed on the screen or printed on paper. A container can be a file that is stored on the system, a folder that is a part of a file system on a storage device, a collection of data on a storage device, a set of instructions for a software program, a group of persons, a collection of animals, a collection of houses, and many other examples. In many data management systems, a source user can navigate to a source container to view the contents of a container. The source user can then navigate to a target container to view the contents of the target container. A source user and a target user can be different users, such as when one user wishes to access information that is on a computer owned by another user or when one user wishes to find a specific file or folder belonging to another user. Navigation to a source container is often accomplished by using a file management system window. Files and folders are usually organized by name into a folder tree. For example, a user can navigate through and access a file or folder by clicking on a mouse button while moving a pointer through a folder tree. By selecting different folders in a file management system, a user can change the view of the folder tree. For example, a user can select a folder that is not the current folder in a folder tree. When a user navigates to a container through a file management system, the file management
