A: You can't simply download a tool without any context information. Whatever it is that you want to achieve, chances are, the answer is there. You can ask at Programmers for a list of tools (that is, so-called "plumbers") that are specific in this kind of work. You might need to filter by the kind of files (typed, dita-x, fonts, etc.) and then search by the tools that you want. It is unlikely that such a list exists (thus programming-specific sites, a dead-simple Google search, etc.), but if you can find it, that would be my solution. There is no "scanahand" I know. There is a "FontForge", but that's just a font editor, nothing special. Here is a request to a list of such tools on CodeProject. To give you some context: Notable among these lists are: TableTune-Editor - list of tablature editors. Downloadable. xlitsoft - list of files/guides for musicians, with a focus on guitarists. Downloadable. Notably, I don't know of any forum specifically for programmers, and I'm not sure if such a thing would even make sense (given that the users that would be interested in the list are the sort that tend to answer questions on StackOverflow). The present invention is directed to the field of semiconductor testing, and in particular to the field of the testing of dynamic random access memories (DRAMs). The primary goal of semiconductor test is to ensure that ICs or ICs packages perform as designed. It is not possible to adequately perform quality control tests on the completed IC, prior to the attachment of the IC to its final assembly or interconnection. The IC packages must be tested prior to shipment, such that IC package manufacturers can efficiently ascertain which IC packages are defective. Manufacturers of dynamic random access memories (DRAMs) employ high-speed wafer probe testing. This is done using wafer probe machines, which have been known and have been manufactured in the past. Wafer probe machines test the devices using the wafer probe itself, and therefor the wafer probe cannot contact the pads of the device under test (DUT). However, many other ICs require the testing of the DUT using a device under test (DUT) probe. Therefore, these other DUT's must use

Sprint now allows for tower dumps from Samsung handsets in certain areas, according to owner's manual. (Source: Sprint) Sprint says the new functionality will allow customers to remove all stored data without the user need to back up their phone manually or risk losing their work due to system corruption. You can now go into your 'My Sprint' section and update your profile information if you wish, but keep in mind you'll not be able to use all the features of the phone. This functionality will be available to those with Sprint Samsung Epic 4G Touch and Samsung Infuse 4G phones running Software Version 4.2.1 and lower, and Android operating systems 2.3.4 and lower. The feature is currently available in the 'LTE Advanced' coverage in the Denver area. Those customers with a Samsung Infuse 4G phone with the latest Software Version 4.3.0 and lower, and Android operating system 2.3.7 and lower are unable to use the function. Those of you with Sprint Samsung Omnia 7 or Samsung Captivate 4G phones and Samsung Galaxy S, Samsung Galaxy Tab or Sprint Galaxy Tab mini phones are able to use this service, but it's limited to the 'LTE Advanced' coverage in the Denver area. We've contacted Sprint to find out if this feature is available anywhere else, so stay tuned for an update. In general, a tire vulcanization device includes a pair of upper and lower mold halves having concave and convex surfaces to form and press a rubber material for the tire during the tire vulcanization process. During the tire vulcanization process, it is important to avoid small air pockets formed between the tire and the vulcanization mold. These small air pockets lead to a roughened surface of the tire and result in poor appearance. Particularly, where the tire has a tread pattern of medium to large size, it is very important that the tire be free of such small air pockets. A tire vulcanization device comprises a plurality of no
