Teddy Bear Racing (TBR) is a venture-backed, Kickstarter-funded, real-world motorsports team that was started by Stanford University mechanical engineering students Jesse Vargas and Avi Bar-Adon. The team is participating in the Toyo Tires Challenge, a National Auto Sport Association sanctioned Formula Mazda race for adult drivers. The team is still developing driver and chassis optimization as they attempt to better their previous best of a 23.614 second lap time. The team is also planning on expanding their presence at local and regional drift events as well as launching a prototype aluminum racing platform that is powered by a AAA battery pack. The TBR team is competing in the Toyota Tires Formula Mazda Drift series at Austin and will participate in additional events in coming months, according to the team's official website.
