An acrylonitrile solution of the type used herein is prepared by the reaction of acrylonitrile with hydrogen cyanide in the presence of a catalyst, such as a platinum catalyst in the form of a finely-divided material, such as chloroplatinic acid. The acrylonitrile is prepared by combining a suitable source of acrylonitrile with the catalyst and hydrogen cyanide in the presence of a solvent such as acetonitrile, in a suitable reactor which is carefully controlled in temperature, pressure and the like, to obtain an equilibrium mixture of monomer, polymer and solvent. The mixture is then subjected to a distillation to remove the solvent. Acrylonitrile may also be produced by the quenching of a thermal, decomposition reaction product. Known processes used for the production of an acrylonitrile solution commonly produce a product containing significant amounts of undissolved polymer, which limits the usefulness of the product. However, the presence of undissolved polymer may interfere with the further preparation and handling of the acrylonitrile solution. Also, the presence of undissolved polymer is wasteful of the very expensive acrylonitrile reactant and the precious platinum catalyst. An acrylonitrile solution with low polymer content and an accompanying method for making the solution, which method does not have disadvantages of the prior art, are provided by the present invention. During the past several years in our laboratory, we have demonstrated

A little while back, I picked up a pack of basil seeds from a friend and planted them. They are growing. They are not growing very well, but I am betting they'll get there. Yesterday was the first time I ate my basil. I fried some eggs and sprinkled some basil on top, and it's really good.

That is the most I ever eat at once, but I am trying to eat more. In my little garden, it will probably get eaten faster than I can eat it all. Apparently, there is a basil industry that must be fed, because they started putting it in gel, which is dehydrated and cheaper, and it is a loss leader. If you buy that version, you know what you are getting. My basil is homegrown. I think that tastes better. But I am starving so I may just eat my basil straight. For what it's worth, I told
