The problem is that the function is not rotating image correctly. def rotat(img,deg) n = imresize(img,[240 240]) n2 = reshape(n,3,240,240) rot = imrotate(n2,deg*[-1,0,1]) return imwrite(rot, 'test.png', 'png'); The result of the rotation is not the expected. Do you have any solutions for the problem? Thank you. A: A simple option is using imrotate, which will save the current image into a rotated version and return the string of the extension of the rotated image. The rotation is defined by a vector and a value (0 through 360 degrees). Here's one way to do it: function imgRotated(img,deg) [height, width, numOfColors] = size(img); newImg = imrotate(img, deg*[-1 0 1]); newImg = imresize(newImg,[240,240]); newImg = imrotate(newImg,360*[1 0 -1]); newImg = imresize(newImg

According to the textbook, I have: The N-Queens problem asks you to place  $n$  distinct queens on an  $n \times n$  chessboard. The complexity of the problem is  $\Theta(8^n)$  according to the textbook. But, as I thought of this problem, if you visit the  $2^n$  cells  $n$  times, then the complexity will be  $O(n)$ . Please help me to confirm this. A: The problem is not  $O(n)$  because you have
