Corn (Zea mays L.) is the most important and abundant crop produced and consumed in the United States. Corn is used as human food, livestock feed, and as raw material in industry. The food uses of corn, in addition to the human consumption of corn kernels, include kernels used for con flour, corn meal and other corn products; as well as cottonseed, soybean and canola oils, which are in turn used for cooking oil and margarine. The grain (or vegetable) portion of corn is used for livestock feed. Corn is an important commodity crop and is a primary source of food and feed for much of the world. The importance of corn to agriculture and people is evidenced by the entire industry devoted to producing corn and corn products. In 2006, the total U.S. crop production of corn was 315.5 million bushels. Corn is used to produce ethanol while corn starch and flour are used in the paper and textile industries. Corn is also used in adhesives, building materials, foundry binders, laundry starches, explosives and oil-well muds. Plant parts other than the grain of corn are also used in industry; for example, stalks and husks are made into paper and wallboard and cobs are used for fuel and to make charcoal. The goal of a corn breeder is to improve a corn plant's performance and therefore, its economic value 6d1f23a050
