Sunday, January 8, 2009 While we were having a downpour on the fourth day of Shravan, Kishori Mohan decided to make a stop-over at a pet shop to get an exchange. This pet shop is situated at the side of a temple with a bell which is made of iron. When Kishori entered the shop, a plump cat entered with a small cat following it. Kishori was surprised at its size, and wanted to make a deal. But the owner said the cat belonged to him and refused to part with it. When Kishori tried to make the cat sit on her lap to sell it, the cat resisted. The owner called his other pets to come and help. But they were afraid of Kishori. So they would only allow the cat to sit on their laps. Kishori was satisfied with this arrangement and asked the price. But the owner said that Kishori should first make the cat sit on his lap, and only then he would consider the price. When Kishori and the other members of the party tried to make the cat sit on their laps, the cat ran off. The owner cursed them and said that if they did not make the cat sit on their laps, they would not get the cat. Kishori saw that he could not get out of this, so she offered money to them. They accepted the money, but demanded to be allowed to sit on the 6d1f23a050
