Related Posts Refrigerant Synthesis and Utilization This week I continue my investigation into the refrigerants and refrigeration cycle. Refrigerants are used to control the temperature of equipment in cooling systems. Units used in large scale cooling systems (think factory floor or large computer room) typically use Freon refrigerants. It is important to understand that the name of the refrigerant is known, but a molecule of refrigerant is never seen in a lab. If you look closely at the vapor above the liquid refrigerant, you might see a gas. However, when you freeze it, you will see the liquid form. Buy st. mary's lab mouse as a laboratory animal In the 1970's, estimates indicated that there were about 300 million people in the world who slept less than five hours a night (Maurer et al., 2005). Historically, sleep disorders are more prevalent among men than women, and this trend continues in modern society. One of the most common sleep disorders is sleep apnea. People with sleep apnea stop breathing while they sleep for longer than three seconds, more than 10 times per hour, and hundreds of times a night.
