Accent is a program from Boz Digital Labs that allows you to recover lost, forgotten or otherwise no longer saved passwords on your Microsoft Office applications. Accent is a password recovery tool that comes with a six-month trial period. For those seeking a more immediate solution you may wish to download the Windows 8. The present invention generally relates to electronic packaging, and more specifically to a low cost, high-throughput, automated pick and place device for positioning an electronic device on a substrate. Semiconductor devices are typically manufactured in batches, referred to as a microbatch. The microbatch typically includes 10-20, 100-200, or more, individual semiconductor devices, each semiconductor device being shaped as an integrated circuit (IC) die. The die may be placed on a substrate, such as a lead frame, card or other packaging substrate. The die may be attached to the substrate by, for example, thermocompression, thermosonic or ultrasonic bonding. Placement of the die on the substrate is typically performed by a pick and place apparatus. An operator connects the substrate to the pick and place apparatus and positions the die on the substrate. The operator typically uses a human eye or a video camera, or a video camera coupled to a CCD sensor, to monitor the placement of the die on the substrate. Once the die is positioned on the substrate, the pick and place apparatus releases the die from the substrate. The pick and place apparatus then picks up the die to position the next die on the substrate. During operation, many pick and place apparatuses use a vacuum-based robot arm to pick and place the die onto the substrate. The vacuum-based robot arm typically has three degrees of freedom, including x, y and z directions, and can be adjusted to position the die on any portion of the substrate.

Unfortunately, the vacuum-based robot arm is relatively expensive and requires an operator to control the robot arm and the travel of the robot arm. Moreover, because of the cost, the pick and place apparatuses are typically limited to a small number of die that can be placed on a substrate. This also limits the performance of a microbatch. Accordingly, an inexpensive, high-throughput pick and place apparatus is desired for manufacturing semiconductor devices. In accordance with one embodiment of the present invention, a pick and place device is provided. The pick and place device
