gameplay.[Interaction of monosodium glutamate with calcium channels]. The effects of monosodium glutamate (MSG) on Ca channels in neurons of the central nervous system of mollusks and birds were studied. The results of the experimental data showed that following a short-term treatment (3 days) with MSG, the sensitivity of neurons to low-threshold Ca channels in mollusks was elevated, and the activity of the N-methyl-D-aspartate (NMDA) receptor was blocked by exogenous glutamate. A longer-term treatment (2 months) with glutamate (200 mg/kg per day) was shown to induce an additional decrease in the sensitivity of neurons to Ca and the development of tolerance to its effects in different structures and a decrease in the population of NMDA receptor-immunoreactive neurons. The changes in the sensitivity of neurons to Ca and their insensitivity to glutamate receptor blockers were accompanied by the decrease in the affinity and number of intracellular Ca channels. I am wondering if you could do me a favor and look at the west and north power
