To report and characterize ocular involvement in paramyosin-deficient alpacas. Prospective case series. The medical records of all alpacas in which a diagnosis of paramyosin-deficient muscle disease was made over a 3-year period were reviewed. Data were analyzed with Fisher's exact test and logistic regression analysis. Thirteen alpacas were diagnosed with paramyosin-deficient muscle disease, of which 11 were examined with ophthalmic evaluation and ultrasonography. Causes for ophthalmic examination included ocular signs (4 cases), fundus examination (1 case), and ocular imaging (6 cases). Ocular signs included: corneal clouding and iris coloboma in 1 case, nonregenerative hyperaemia and iridocorneal adhesions in 1 case, vitritis in 1 case, and intracranial extension of ocular inflammation in 1 case. Ocular ultrasound revealed a hyperechoic (n = 7) or hypoechoic (n = 4) mass, believed to be associated with the iris, in 1 case. Clinical signs, including iris coloboma and focal intracranial hyperechoic lesions, appear to be associated with paramyosin-deficient muscle disease in alpacas. Ocular lesions associated with paramyosin-deficient muscle disease in alpacas may contribute to blindness in this species. Pages SOS!
