Is that right? Can I install Inventor 9/10 on a portable USB hard drive? And then run Inventor from several other computers, not of course the same one. Yes. Yes, sure. Of course, if you have a portable USB hard drive. You can run Inventor from multiple different computers from the same portable media. To do this, you need to configure the USB port for data recording. When you install a USB port and set up Inventor, Inventor writes data to the portable hard drive and not to the registry. By default, the USB port should be set to write data. Check the "Write to Registry" checkbox to change this value.
