the british english corpus is a corpus built from students taking a university-level course in english taught at a british university. in 1992, the first edition of the british corpus of academic spoken english was published. new collections of both standardized and dialectal speech were compiled in the following years. the most recent additions to the base sets are the bueus, besel, and the baker, which are primarily based on a collection of speech from the university of birmingham. all of these corpora can be used for instruction purposes, and for many of these language learning systems, the corpora can be used as the sole source of material; the five volumes contain over four million tokens.

the wlapl corpus was specifically designed for the teaching of english to adults. it consists of over 100,000 words spoken at different times and in different locations in and around bournemouth in the uk. it was acquired by the university of southampton between 1992 and 2000, and recently made available to the general public through the internet. that distribution includes the frequency counts of some of the corpus words as well as the separate indices which can be used to locate words or to measure their 'richness' in a corpus. in the biblio-linguistic evaluation section of the bac report, the wlapl corpus was given a score of 78 out of 100 on its suitability for teaching. in addition to the corpus, there are a number of wordlists available from the bac report itself, including the complete set of wlapl corpus words (excluding those pronouncing the w in their phonetic transcriptions), a complete list of the most frequent w words, and a regular and irregular wordlist. with the wlapl corpus, the lecturer can concentrate on teaching the students and not worry about metalinguistic questions, such as is the w a vowel or a consonant? these corpora have therefore been invaluable tools in our everyday lives. in summary, a wide selection of corpora and corpora components are all available from a number of on-line dictionaries, and teachers and students alike will find them useful in their studies. though the corpora available are not as large as some of the other material available on-line, they nevertheless make a wealth of target variety materials available for analysis and interpretation. such resources range from a comprehensive british english corpus, to a growing repository of student material, to an open-access source of information and feedback. are they enough? will every language teacher need corpora? probably not. la vista está diseñada para utilizar una pantalla del tamaño completo del aparato. esto es útil cuando queremos crear una serie completa de sesiones (como la más básica, pero que el vídeo esté contenido). esta opción está habilitada por defecto si se usa una tarjeta de grabación estándar (non-thunderbolt). si se utiliza un thunderbolt con grabación dvi-d, mueve la pantalla completa al sobre del thunderbolt. para importar el grabado de un archivo de móvil en la grabación, selecciona la opción &settings-import= en el navegador que contendría la grabación estándar. utilice "importar" para importar el archivo de móvil. para utilizar la extensión, desplace el archivo de móvil en el directorio de la máquina (no el directorio del enlace). al haber más de una extensión, deben seleccionarse las extensiones correctas. cuando se seleccionen todos los archivos, puede utilizar la opción &stargate-add-files-in-instant= para añadir los archivos de móvil a la grabación en instancias. 5ec8ef588b
