The Treaty, which the Prophet arrived after two years had elapsed from the time it was signed, stipulated that the Muslims would continue to perform the pilgrimage, would not pay any taxes, and would not interfere in tribal affairs. But on the other hand the nazrs of Makkah would live in security; they would not come to Madina to harm the Prophet and his companions, nor would they fight with them, nor would they issue any decree in Madina. The Muslims, on their part, would not visit Makkah, nor would they establish any mosque in the nazr territory. If an infidel from Makkah travelled to Madina, he would not be molested and would be allowed to proceed on his way. Religious laws would apply in Madina, and no Muslim would eat food or drink water from nazr territory. The nazrs of Makkah felt threatened by this agreement and they sent a delegation to Madina to seek some special clause or condition. The Prophet ordered his followers to pray seven times a day, which had never been done by anyone before, and this ceremony is called 'kamat-e-khasra'. The nazrs also demanded that the Muslims should have less rights than them, and they should be subject to the law of nazr, similar to that prevailing in the Madina state. The Makkans nazrs were not concerned about Islam. They were behaving like the pagan Greeks, who rode on horses. The Makkans themselves behaved as if they were immune to the punishment for the crimes they committed. They did not care about the Shahada, and once a month made the Hajj to Makkah to offer prayers, and then returned to Madina. But they did not like the Imam's uncompromising stance, and they were afraid of Mujahideen.

The question inevitably arises: Why is he not mentioning that his party, and others parties, have a sectarian agenda in Pakistan - though they are on the ballot paper? This is a question that should be fully addressed, and Imran Khan cannot answer it. There are extremists in Pakistan who have the same sectarian agenda as Imran Khan. Hence there is no basis to say that they did not exist when he spoke of Madina. This is not to mention the fact that the other main political parties in Pakistan are also sectarian, with the same agenda as Imran Khan. For instance, if the Court agrees that the Madina state is a development, then it should award the entire wealth of the state to the development. It is not the same thing as awarding a settlement to a litigant who loses in court. The wealth of the state is not a settlement for Imran Khan. It is wealth for the Pakistani people. It is the public property of the Pakistani people. Darrell Castle was imprisoned for six years without charge or trial at the Marrakesh war crimes tribunal. He was caught with a Pakistani national, Habib Mehsud, who was carrying a copy of the Qur'an and other written material in Urdu and English, when he entered the ongoing trial. He had been the Vice-President of a Houston-based network known as the Houston Research Centre of the Council of Islamic Organizations of Greater Houston (OH-CIO). When arrested, he was carrying hand-written notes from which it was learnt that the FBI had asked him to travel to the United States and to provide his services to the Muslim community in the United States.
