now if you're using vista x64, i have found that you can speed up your pc by running performance monitor and going to memory and starting to clear out the cache. i have noticed that if you have a high amount of cache, when you open a lot of programs, the system will start to get slower. this is because of the memory cache, the memory your applications are allocating in order to make your computer work faster, gets full and there is no space left for the program to run. now coming to this windows 8 x64, it's really fast, faster than windows 7 x64 and it has the same page file size as windows 7. so you don't need a big hard disk to run windows 8 so it won't slow down your system. it has also an option to shrink your page file by turning off the automatic hibernation. some users are saying that vista x64 is running faster than windows 7. i have tested them both and there is no performance difference between them. you have to understand that there is a performance difference between x64 and x86 versions. so if you're comparing vista x64 to windows 7 x86, you are not really comparing the same versions. i will also comment that there are no major problems with windows 7, so there is no need to worry. while comparing windows 7 and windows 8 there are 3 major improvements in windows 8, 1) it doesn't use more power than windows 7. so you don't need a bigger power adapter. 2) you can look at the battery life estimate, so you don't have to worry about not having the battery. 3) there are two keyboards for use so you can switch between them. 5ec8ef588b
