it is also a story that is far removed from the politics of the new millennium. with its story on small-town values, rocket singh is an ode to a more innocent india. filled with chota manta (sticky, hand-me-down) customs that are not only uplifting but also quirky, rocket singh stands as a nostalgic treat. it can serve as a gentle reminder of the simple things that matter. and it stands as a spiritual guide to everyday life. as i keep watching this movie, i am telling myself i am getting wiser, not graying. harpreet's accidental match with dev will leave you grinning. rajpal yadav is a man who has it all and does not need to put on airs. just have a look at him alone in a coffee shop. he comes across as a very real and very endearing character. connecting rocket singh and rajkumar hirani's previous film, hirani will claim he and his wife kiran rao are far more mature today. just like their previous movie, it has a perfectly tuned balance of both. like padamsee's character? the honest qualities of his true self always come through and inspire others to do good and love their job. it is refreshingly free of the excessive flourish, the heroics and melodrama that almost every yash raj film comes with. writer jaideep sahani, who wrote chak de india!, does not attempt a story that is big in scope or vision. like chak de india! rocket singh also has the hook of the underdog, but harpreet is not chasing lofty dreams. he is a middle-class boy brought up by his grandfather (very convincingly played by prem chopra) with middle-class values give us a good life of honesty and truth, he prays in front of a photograph of guru gobind singh, lit up by a garland of twinkling tea lights who wants to be a good salesman. 5ec8ef588b
