A Kenyan actor has been arrested after he was filmed allegedly raping a girl who has a disability and in poor health. The victim was rushed to hospital where doctors confirmed the sexual assault had taken place. Odilia Okoth, 27, who is accused of sexually assaulting the girl, was also accused of forcing her to touch him and taking lewd photos of her. The footage, shot on a mobile phone, has led to the arrest of the actor. The allegations first surfaced when a relative of the alleged victim wrote a letter to police. A spokesman for the Kenya

Film Classification Board told Al Jazeera that filming in a disabled individual is prohibited. "This is a clear violation of the law and can lead to prosecution," said Adam Ochomo. The Nairobi police said a case was opened after a complaint was received and was due to be transferred to the state police headquarters. Kenya's NTV station reported on Thursday that police were now hunting for the girl's mother. "We will only know if a mother or a guardian has been identified in the letter when we speak to the mother," said KFCB spokesman Ochomo. Since 2008, Kenya's gender-based violence act has made it illegal to have sex with a person who is "mentally or physically incapable of giving consent." The act also applies to rape and sexual abuse of people with physical or intellectual disabilities. Rape is a crime that can be punished by a prison term of at least seven years.
