The group had been playing a football match when the accident happened. Police say they believe the collapse occurred because of heavy rain. None of the schoolchildren died. About 2,000 children and staff have now been reunited, police say. An inspection of the crash site has been made and officials say that the primary school will remain closed for a while. "All of them have been taken to hospital. We have received reports that the condition of one boy is serious," a police officer told AFP news agency. Image copyright Reuters Image caption The incident happened just before school began on Monday Teachers were initially trapped in the tunnel for about two hours, during which time several of them had to be rescued by air force helicopters, according to news agency ANI. Most of the children were injured when the tunnel collapsed, the reports said. India's emergency services minister, O.P. Singh, said the accident was "an example of neglect" by the school authorities. "The tragedy has shaken the
