Massive and Modular Web Application Architecture. The runtime is written in Java and consists of a core package that contains the application logic. This package is shared by all modules that implement a specific service. Each module comprises a portlet, BPMN model or BPEL process, and a set of Java classes that implement the functionality.. All the modules implement the same interfaces so that the application logic is accessible from the UI server and the library modules. .(1) Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method of and an apparatus for reading data codes from a media while a media is being continuously moved. (2) Description of the Prior Art Data storage media, particularly optical disks, have been developed for recording programs for use as recording/playback media for computers. In the following description of the prior art, reference will be made to compact disks (CD) as an example of the optical disk, but the description also includes other types of optical disks. Generally, an optical disk is a circular plate-shaped medium on which data are recorded in a spiral track, and data are read by detecting an optical beam that has been projected onto the track. There are two types of optical disks; one of these is a CD-ROM which is read only. The other type is a CD-R or -RW which is rewritable. With a CD-R or -RW, data are recorded according to a so-called CLV (constant linear velocity) system in which a recording track is divided into a data zone and a non-data zone, and the data zone is divided into a plurality of sectors each of which includes a lead-in sector located at the innermost periphery of the data zone, a data sector, and a lead-out sector located at the outermost periphery of the data zone.
