Complete Ebook Collection Download link for Sinhala Novels .In a conventional wireless local area network (WLAN) standard defined by Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE) 802.11a/g, a physical layer of a transmitter can directly transmit data to a receiver based on a time division multiple access (TDMA) format. On the contrary, in IEEE 802.11n WLAN standards, a medium access control (MAC) layer in the transmitter divides data received from a physical layer into a plurality of blocks to divide resource blocks (RBs) and notifies the receiver of resource allocation information. If the receiver fails to receive the resource allocation information, the receiver may receive not only data of its own but also other-node data. Accordingly, a method of allocating resources to improve efficiency of the receiver by
