2011-11-22 13:20:17 WHILE YOU WERE NOT PAYING ATTENTION, YOU. Stopped Playing The Facebook Game Hearthstone- x On my part I will either go back to WoW or Destiny which i have to be honest, i like. to me the two best MMOs i've played in the last 6 years. Oh and let's not forget Anarchy Online. But i'll go back to Destiny come the Xbox One release. There's no way i'm gonna invest more time and money in WAR. However we have the Game Hub (I love that name) which i'm gonna use for War - so it's never been used. Well that's not entirely true. I do remember when they came out with the last public test server, which cost a minimum fee to be able to do a DPS test. It was pretty fun (I assume i'm not the only one who did it). However it's a little expensive to run. I guess if you're playing this for a while you can save and pay later. Well that's not so much of an issue for me though, since there's no prospect of me doing that for a long time. I'm not a member of the core community. I'm just there to see what the new expansion brings. And honestly even though i know about a number of RPG and FPS - none of them really attract me. Destiny and Warhammer Fantasy are much more interesting to me. Yes, the game was great the demo was amazing. However you're not much better off being able to buy the expansions in one shot, than to be able to buy them as you go along. This is all the more important in the context of a lot of people having to buy the game to play it. The problem with an MMO is, that you're always paying for content. Either the loot (yay!), the server (yay!), your subscription (yay!). It's really not a lot of fun in the long run. I'd rather buy a new expansion, for whatever price, and then re-buy it whenever it's worth it. So far i have gathered and realized there are few things that are actually in this game i like. Concept Combat (although again it's nice to be able to see things better) The map The crafting The activity The buildings The gardening The resources
